

SCOTT C. PLEIN

Scott is the founding principal of Equinox Investments, LLC, a real estate investment, development, and management firm specializing in community planning, entitlements, and project development in the Northern Virginia area. The company was founded in 1999.

A lifelong resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia, Scott began his career in 1976 when he founded KT Enterprises, Inc., a local landscape development firm. KT and its affiliate company, Total Development Solutions, provide turn-key site development solutions for some of the most prestigious home builders, developers, and commercial contractors in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. Together, Scott and his various partners provide quality jobs for more than 350 employees in the Northern Virginia region.

An involved citizen in the community in which he lives, Scott recognizes the great importance and responsibility of giving back and supports many non-profits and charitable groups through a devotion of financial resources and personal involvement. He serves on several local boards and philanthropic organizations:

- As Chair of the American Horticultural Society (AHS), the nation's most respected and longstanding gardening organization, Scott's leadership has ensured the protection, preservation, and continuing public access to the historic River Farm that once formed part of George Washington's Mount Vernon estate, and furthered the AHS mission of sharing with all Americans the critical role of plants, gardens, and green spaces in creating healthy, livable communities. Scott has also been involved in AHS's recent sustainable gardening initiatives.
- Scott's dedication to clean water began in the late 80s. His involvement with the Potomac Riverkeeper Network, a nonprofit dedicated to protecting the entire Potomac Watershed through legal advocacy and community outreach, helps ensure the protection of this important natural resource. Scott serves on the PRKN board and is a member of the Shenandoah River Committee.
- Scott is a strong supporter of higher education. He serves on the Dean's Advisory Council for George Mason University's Donald G. Costello College of Business, which advises and assists the dean in achieving the college's mission. In this role, Scott has held a particular focus on the construction and development of a new School of Business facility. Scott also serves on the Advisory Board for the Smithsonian-Mason School of Conservation. Through the Plein Environmental Scholarship, Scott and his family are proud to support undergraduate students studying environmental topics.

Through Scott's commitment to mentorship, he has been able to greatly influence and guide many of our future commercial real estate leaders. His mentorship outreach extends to NAIOP Northern Virginia's Developing Leaders program and AASuccess. At AASuccess, Scott lends operational guidance and mentoring advocacy to Asian American and other minority students to advance the social, personal, and professional fulfillment of our young citizens.

Previously, Scott served on several local and regional boards: the Northern Virginia Transportation Alliance and the Northern Virginia Chapter of NAIOP. He is a past president of the Northern Virginia Building Industry Association, as well as the Dulles South Alliance. Scott also chaired the Building and Development Committee for Capital Caring's "Adler Center for Caring", a state-of-the-art inpatient hospice and palliative care center located in Aldie, Virginia. Scott is a past Chairman of the George Mason University Center for Real Estate Entrepreneurship (CREE), a research center devoted to the advancement of real estate research and education in the real estate development profession. And in keeping with Scott's desire to help shape the face of real estate development in a sustainable fashion, Scott also engages with students who are enrolled in the George Mason Master of Science in Real Estate Development Program. Scott previously served on the board of Mason Housing Inc., which provided affordable housing for GMU faculty, staff, graduate students, and affiliates.

Scott is devoted to the White House Farm Foundation, a nonprofit educational foundation that he established after his purchase of the 270-acre historic White House property in Luray, Virginia. Through the Foundation, he strives to enrich individuals with the knowledge of and involvement in our natural ecological systems, holistic community planning, conservation, and respect for local history and culture. The Plein Family is currently supporting an extensive historic rehabilitation project on the White House; an iconic Page Valley landmark built in 1760. The family's goal is to bring the White House to an interpretive standard, allowing the Foundation to host educational programs and tours of the building for the public.

Scott's cornerstone project, Villages of Piedmont at Leopold's Preserve, has been touted by Prince William County officials as "a model for preservation-oriented land planning". This award-winning project exemplifies Scott's deep commitment to the environment and ecological systems, particularly as it pertains to finding a balance between human habitat needs and preserving our natural habitats. One of the most compelling aspects of the project is its impressive open-space commitment—the permanent conservation of 380 acres dedicated to the legacy of famous conservationist Aldo Leopold. Today, the public park, Leopold's Preserve, sees 20,000 visitors annually who enjoy its 7 miles of walking trails, interpretive signage, observation platforms, and wildflower meadows. 35 educational signs showcase the environmental and historic features of the property and the surrounding area. Scott's White House Farm Foundation funds its ongoing maintenance, upkeep, and educational programs.

The Northern Virginia Conservation Trust (NVCT) holds the perpetual conservation easement that protects Leopold's Preserve. Scott is a longtime supporter of their work and has been involved in promoting conservation easements to developers. He is a proud member of NVCT's Great Blue Heron Circle.
